AG Derek Schmidt Urges FCC To Accelerate Deadline for Anti-Robocall Technology

TOPEKA – Kansas Attorney General Derek Schmidt has joined attorneys general from all 49 other states and the District of Columbia in urging the Federal Communications Commission to help states continue to fight the scourge of illegal robocalls by accelerating a deadline for smaller telephone companies to implement specialized caller ID technology.

Under the TRACED Act, which became law in 2019, phone companies are required to implement STIR/SHAKEN technology on their networks. This caller ID authentication technology helps ensure that telephone calls are originating from verified numbers, not spoofed sources. Large companies were required to implement the technology by June 2021, and smaller phone companies were given an extension until June 2023.

“In order to meaningfully disrupt the onslaught of illegal robocalls and call spoofing perpetrated by and/or through these providers, it is critical that each provider be required to take steps to mitigate its illegal call traffic by, at the very least, implementing the STIR/SHAKEN call authentication framework as soon as possible,” the attorneys general wrote. “[T]he State Attorneys General are committed to working together to efficiently and effectively disrupt those providers that originate and route high volumes of illegal traffic with impunity and without fear of consequences.”

The attorneys general are asking the FCC to require these companies to implement the STIR/SHAKEN technology as soon as possible and no later than June 30, 2022. In 2019, Schmidt joined attorneys general from 49 states and the District of Columbia in reaching an agreement with 12 major telecom companies, outlining a set of eight principles to fight illegal robocalls through both prevention and enforcement efforts. The agreement included implementing technologies to authenticate that callers are coming from a valid source. Portions of this agreement were later codified by Congress in the TRACED Act.

In Kansas, the attorney general's Consumer Protection Division works to enforce do-not-call laws and protect Kansas consumers from being harassed and scammed by robocalls. More information is available on the attorney general's consumer protection website at www.InYourCornerKansas.org.

Common Questions about the Advance Child Tax Credit Payments

The advance child tax credit allows qualifying families to receive early payments of the tax credit many people may claim on their 2021 tax return during the 2022 tax filing season. The IRS will disburse these advance payments monthly through December 2021. Here some details to help people better understand these payments.

Who is a qualifying child for the purposes of the advance child tax credit payment?

For tax year 2021, a qualifying child is an individual who does not turn 18 before January 1, 2022, and meets these requirements:

- The individual is the taxpayer's son, daughter, stepchild, eligible foster child, brother, sister, stepbrother, stepsister, half-brother, half-sister or a descendant such as a grandchild, niece, or nephew.

- The individual does not provide more than one-half of his or her own support during 2021.

- The individual lives with the taxpayer for more than one-half of tax year 2021. For exceptions to this requirement, see Publication 972, Child Tax Credit and Credit for Other Dependents.

- The individual is properly claimed as the taxpayer's dependent. For more information about how to do this, see Publication 501, Dependents, Standard Deduction, and Filing Information.

- The individual does not file a joint return with the individual's spouse for tax year 2021 or files it only to claim a refund of withheld income tax or estimated tax paid.

- The individual was a U.S. citizen, U.S. national, or U.S. resident alien. For more information on this condition, see Publication 519, S. Tax Guide for Aliens.

What should someone do if they don't want to receive advance child tax credit payments?

Anyone who does not want to receive monthly advance child tax credit payments because they would rather claim the full credit when they file their 2021 tax return, or because they know they will not be eligible for the credit in 2021 can unenroll through the Child Tax Credit Update Portal. People can unenroll at any time, but deadlines apply each month for the update to take effect for the next payment.

For people married and filing jointly, they and their spouse must unenroll using the Child Tax Credit Update Portal. If only one person unenrolls, they will still receive half the normal payment. Similarly, if you are changing bank account information, both of you must make the update so both halves of your payment go to the new account.

Will receiving advance child tax credit payments affect other government benefits?

No. Advance child tax credit payments cannot be counted as income when determining if someone is eligible for benefits or assistance, or how much they can receive, under any federal, state or local program financed in whole or in part with federal funds. These programs cannot count advance child tax credit payments as a resource when determining eligibility for at least 12 months after payments are received.

Are advance child tax credit payments taxable?

No. These payments are not income and will not be reported as income on a taxpayer's 2021 tax return. These payments are advance payments of a person's tax year 2021 child tax credit.

However, the total amount of advance child tax credit payments someone receives is based on the IRS's estimate of their 2021 child tax credit. Generally, the IRS uses information from previous tax returns to calculate a person's estimate. If the total is greater than the child tax credit amount, they can claim on their 2021 tax return, they may have to repay the excess amount on their 2021 tax return. For example, if someone receives advance child tax credit payments for two qualifying children claimed on their 2020 tax return, but they no longer have qualifying children in 2021, the advance payments they received are added to their 2021 income tax unless they qualify for repayment protection.

Do you want the good news or the bad news? Let's see where I should start, hmmm. Guess I will start with the good news. There WILL be an Argentine Parade and right now they have it scheduled for October the 2nd. Hooray, we are coming alive again. Now here is another piece of good news. Turner Days is also scheduled, and it is for the 9th and 10th of October. Another hooray. But no parade. So, we get a parade in Argentine, no parade in Turner but the fairgrounds in Turner no fairgrounds in Argentine. If you understand this, put it on your calendar.

Had a busy day yesterday. Delivered The Record, went to the store and CVS, took my little furbaby to get his toenails cut, then to the dentist.

But, today was a different story. I am mourning my two dogs that passed three weeks apart, trying to take care of Mr. Ed, plus do all the other stuff I have to do now.

Got the Community garden sign finished and have to take it down there on 55th street. Finished painting my kitchen and bathroom. Just relaxing today and heard, SUE!!!!!!! I tore down the hallway and there lay Mr. Ed. He fell out of bed, knocked over his lamp, looked like a tornado hit his room. Well, I couldn't pull him up, so I got a chair for him to pull up on, didn't work. I got a large bath towel, managed to get it under him and pulled him up the hallway while he was laying on his back to the front room by the couch. Still couldn't get him up. By that time my back was killing me. Hey, those men across the street. I went out on the front porch and whistled, and one came over. I showed him our dilemma and he said, "let me get my partner." They were both masked of course and got him sitting on the couch. So now, he'll be using his walker. Part of the time anyway. They asked him all kinds of questions to make sure he was all right. I figured they could get him up quicker than calling 911. By then, I was exhausted. But I had to straighten up his room, sweep it, make sure his lamp wasn't broken.

Well, my dear readers, hope you are all doing well, wear your masks, get your shots. I don't know why some people object to getting those shots. Remember the polio era? Remember the floods when we had to get those typhoid shots? Remember the small-pox shots? I still have my scar from that, but at least I am alive. I have known people already that had the virus and let me tell you, I heard it is no fun. A distant cousin of ours passed from covid. I know personally six people that had it and it knocked them pretty hard. So, what is the problem? It is just a shot. Mr. Ed and I still wear our masks when we go anywhere.

Lvya all, please take care. I want you all around for all the wonderful things that are going to happen after all this is over. For this too shall pass. Your friend from Argentine. Sue Heart to Heart The years weave a bond of love among sisters. At first glance, this seems to be an uncomplicated connection, but examine it closely and you'll discover threads of memory entwined with trust, hope, laughter and tears. In memory of my three wonderful sisters whom I love and miss. Gayle, Carolyn and Marilyn of Argentine.

Our sympathy goes to LaVonne Scott, the receptionist of a local doctor in Argentine. I have known LaVonne quite a few years and we even played Bunko together some time back. One of her sons was murdered through the malicious act of his ex-wife at 9th and Central Ave. He was sitting on his front porch and was fatally shot. She held a memorial for him at Wyandotte Lake with the release of balloons. She is raising Hope, her deceased son's daughter. Just last week, another son was killed on a freeway ramp while he was adjusting a ladder on the truck. A speeding car hit his and his father-in-law's business truck.

His father-in-law is in very serious condition and her son was killed immediately. Please think of LaVonne and the family he leaves behind.

The Dating Game Killer

By: Sue Reich

Some of you may not remember the old tv show called The Dating Game. We used to watch it all the time. A contestant would sit on one side of a folded screen and three "dates" would be on the other side of the screen. If it was a female, she would ask questions to three men. It was quite funny. This one particular show had the usual contestants on, and the woman would question and pick one. I won't mention her name, but the #1 guy had some strange answers, but she picked him. Later, she decided she really didn't want to go out with him. Just a weird feeling she said. What she didn't know, before he got on the show, he had murdered four women within a week or two. His name was Rodney Alcala. He was a serial killer that had been hunted for killing and assaulting six women and one girl. He started that in the 70's. He died on July 24, 2021 and was 77 years old. The lady that decided not to date him after all, saved her own life. She had a feeling and followed through with that feeling. She was one of the lucky ones.

These men are working diligently on the street. They are going to put in a new meter further away from the street.

This big cement mixer truck was in front of our house repairing the street where a large hole had been dug by a bulldozer.

The large pile of dirt is where the old meter was.

Comin' & Goin' Turner Style

Always on the lookout for different authors, not necessarily new ones, I ran across the name of a Canadian novelist that has been around for quite a while – Louise Penny. She writes “cozy” mysteries. I had to look that up and a “cozy” mystery is one that is less violent and gory than modern crime fiction. Compared to Agatha Christie’s Poirot, Chief Inspector Gamache of the Surete du Quebec is the main character and appears in over 15 novels. In the first book, the body of a woman has been found in the woods outside a small village - murder or accident? The inspector and his crew are sent to investigate. One of the most interesting conversations Gamache had with a villager was the different way the English and the French view each other. The town where the incident occurred was an English speaking village.

You see, Quebec province is the only Canadian province in which French is the primary language. It goes back to the time when the French occupied an area called New France in North America that ran from the north to the Gulf of Mexico and west of Mississippi (1543-1763) when acquired by the British. The official language in Quebec is French and in 1977, a law was passed that French was the work language in large corporations. Only about 10 percent of the population speak English in their homes.

The English character speaking to Gamache expected a difficult conversation but was surprised the Inspector was bilingual. The English gentleman felt discriminated against in his own country while the Frenchman felt that the English were well respected. Gamache believed that one of the fundamental differences between anglophones (the English) and francophones Quebecers was that the English believed in individual rights and the French had to protect collective rights- their language and culture. I also found (with further snooping on the internet) that non-French or non-British immigrants are called allophones.

I can’t help myself. Once I find something that interests me, I can’t stop digging for more information. I probably spent an hour reading about Quebec and Canada, information that won’t mean anything to anyone but me. This stuff keeps me going. As I’ve already noted many times, learning doesn’t end when formal education does, it’s a lifelong journey and I’ll continue it until I can’t anymore.

Until next time, stay safe and please be kind to those around you.

Governor Laura Kelly Proclaims August as Immunization Awareness Month, Encourages Kansans to get Vaccinated

TOPEKA – As part of her efforts to raise awareness of the importance of getting vaccinated against all vaccine-preventable diseases, Governor Laura Kelly today proclaimed August 2021 as Immunization Awareness Month in Kansas.

“Staying up-to-date on vaccinations is essential to protecting our communities from the threat of preventable illnesses, including COVID-19,” Governor Kelly said. “Vaccines are safe, effective, and are readily available. This Immunization Awareness Month, I encourage Kansans to talk to their friends and family about the importance of getting vaccinated against all preventable diseases and doing their part to protect the health and safety of all Kansas communities.”

The proclamation states that vaccines have greatly reduced infectious diseases that once routinely killed or harmed many infants, children, and adults – and it encourages people of all ages to talk with their health care providers about the vaccines necessary to protect their health and the health of their families.

Additionally, the proclamation details that getting vaccinated on time is important, as postponed vaccines could cause the reemergence of certain viruses and diseases – and further exacerbate the COVID-19 pandemic.

“We are committed to our mission of protecting and improving the health of all Kansans and receiving routine immunizations are vital to that effort,” Dr. Lee Norman, Secretary for the Kansas Department of Health and Environment, said. “Now more than ever, we encourage everyone to get their vaccines to protect themselves and their family from preventable diseases.”

Symptoms of the New Covid-19 Variant

By: Tom Valverde

1. Fever
2. Shortness of breath
3. Flu-like, respiratory problems.
4. Fatigue and muscle aches.
5. Digestive issues.

The best protection is still the readily available vaccine. They are effective in protecting against and minimizing damage from the delta variant. At present, all of the Kansas City metro area is considered high risk for delta variant transmission. The unified government of Wyandotte County/Kansas City, Ks has approved mandatory mask wearing while indoors at public spaces for most residents over the age of 5, regardless of vaccine status. School districts in Bonner Springs and Edwardsville are the only exceptions. UG website, source.

As the current surge continues, the number of associated cases is predicted to rise, in the next few weeks. 83% of new us cases are of the delta variant. The delta variant that is from England, is twice as contagious as the alpha variant, according to Yale Medicine. They report that delta's new symptoms are more cold and flu-like: headaches, sore throat, runny nose and fever. "The increase risk for hospitalization is roughly double, for patients infected with the delta variant," said Yale Medicine researchers.

Unvaccinated children and their families are at the greatest risk because of the variant's high degree of being easily transmitted. According to the Kaiser Family Foundation, fewer than 1% of fully vaccinated people will experience a breakthrough covid-19 infection. The Pfizer vaccine has proven that, after 2 doses, it still provides strong protection against the delta variant, according to data from Scotland and other countries." All studies indicate that people who are vaccinated are protected against hospitalization and severe disease due to the delta variant. Urge your loved ones to be vaccinated. Don't add to the over 616,000 covid pandemic deaths in the United States. Data source, John's Hopkins.

Tom's Tasty Treats

By: Tom Valverde

This week's tasty treat is an easy to make quick bread. The recipe includes flavors that will be great from now until the Fall. It's a recipe from a good friend from HALLS, and I made a few changes to make it my own. The recipe will produce two loaves, one to keep, and the other to wrap well and freeze for later. Better yet, take the second loaf to a live alone friend or family member! They are sure to love:

Tom's Pumpkin Date Quick Bread Ingredients:

Ingredients:

- 1 c canned Pumpkin
- 1 c Applesauce
- 2/3 c Canola oil
- 3 Lg. Eggs, beaten
- 1/2 c Milk
- 1 1/2 t Vanilla
- 3 2/3 c Flour
- 1 c Brown Sugar
- 1 c Sugar
- 1 t Baking Powder
- 1 1/2 t Baking Soda
- 2 t Cinnamon
- 1 t Nutmeg
- 1/2 t Ginger
- 1 t Salt
- 1 c chopped Dates
- 1 c Pecans, toasted and chopped coarsely
- Bread Topping:
- 1/2 c Brown Sugar
- 3/4 t Cinnamon
- 1/4 t Salt
- 1/2 c Pecans, chopped

Directions:

Set oven to 350°. Liberally grease the two loaf pans, sized 9x5x3".

In a large mixing bowl, mix to combine all the ingredients down to the ~~~.

In another bowl, combine and whisk together all the dry ingredients.

Add the flour mixture gradually to the pumpkin mixture, stir until well mixed. Add and stir in the chopped dates and the pecans. Divide the batter between the two loaf pans.

Prepare the topping by placing the ingredients in a bowl and stirring to combine. Sprinkle the topping over the batter.

Bake at 350° for 50 - 60 minutes. Use the wooden skewer test to see if the loaves are finished baking. The skewer should come out clean when done. Let the loaves cool in their pans for 15 minutes. Then remove them from the pans, and place on a wire rack to finish cooling.

The apple sauce and the spices give this pumpkin bread its great taste. It's good served plain but try it with some soft butter or cream cheese! Yum, nothing is going to beat that! Everyone will love it. Serve it with iced coffee or tea, now when it's so hot. In the Fall, try it with a cup of mulled cider or hot coffee. Store in a large freezer bag. Enjoy!
